Market Commentary – May 2009

The Fed may have made a policy mistake when it backed away from quantitative easing and allowed 10-year Treasury yields first to break through 3.0% then through 3.5%. Initially, the move to higher rates did not put pressure on spread products (mortgages, corporates and asset-backed securities), as the central bank likely viewed the renewed appetite for riskier assets as a positive development. Towards the latter part of the month, however, we saw a weakening in the mortgage market. The question remains: How will the Fed respond to these higher yields? While we continue to forecast positive economic growth by Q4 2009, our primary concern remains whether this growth will be sustained. We believe the recent rise in interest rates may pose risks to sustainability.

In May, the SEC yield on the Fund was 0.47%. We continued to add high quality industrial corporate names and agency notes to the portfolio, helping maintain both the quality of securities and the yield at a high level. The portfolio remains extremely liquid with more than 45% of the portfolio invested in overnight and short-term securities. Additionally, 82% of the portfolio is invested in government or government guaranteed securities, with 18% of the portfolio representing non-government positions.
