Economic and Market Commentary January 2019

In the month of January, risk assets snapped back after a disappointing finish to 2018. The two-year U.S. Treasury yield fell three basis points to 2.46% and 10-year Treasury yields fell five basis points to 2.63%, compared to levels at the end of December. While the partial government shut-down dominated headlines much of the month, a reopening marked a return to normalcy, and US stock indices ended the month with their biggest January gains since the 1980s.

The Federal Reserve signaled to the market that the gradual rate hike increases are no longer their intention, and that a pause in balance sheet runoff is a possibility this year. The Treasury market viewed their statement as very dovish, leading a large rally especially in front end yields. The FOMC kept the target range for the federal funds rate at 2.25-2.50% at its January meeting. Based on comments by Fed Chair Powell in the press conference, we think the bar to another hike is high. We expect an extended “pause” for most of 2019 before just one rate hike in September, if the data warrants such a move. Without the need to move quickly it’s difficult to see another move after that until early 2020. Ultimately, we think the Fed still gets to ~3% on fed funds, with one hike in 2019 and one in 2020.

The unemployment rate was 4% in January and firms added 304,000 net, new jobs to nonfarm payrolls over the month. Initial claims for unemployment are near an almost 50-year low, indicating a tight labor market and are in line with the strong jobs reports. Housing remains a soft spot in the economy. Home prices rose at the slowest pace since 2015, declining for an eighth straight month due to buyer reluctance to pay higher prices, at higher lending rates, for limited inventories.

Divergence is the theme of the global economy right now. While growth in the U.S. is offsetting some of the weakness in China and euro area, data points to slower overall global economic growth in 2019 versus 2018. A sharp slowdown in Germany’s economic growth, trade tensions and a potentially disruptive British exit from the European Union have soured the outlook for Europe. Europe’s economy is giving people the jitters and investors ponder whether the European Central Bank will rethink plans to tighten monetary policy this year. And while China and the U.S. met to discuss trade politics, nothing concrete was accomplished.

Florida Trust Short Term Bond Fund

The Florida Trust Short-Term Bond Fund posted a total return of +0.38% in January, compared to the benchmark ICE BofAML 1-3 Year Treasury Index return of +0.27%. Credit spreads recovered from the widest levels at year end, and spread sectors produced positive excess returns over similar maturity Treasuries (corporates an impressive +41 basis points). Demand for U.S. Treasuries remained elevated, as the market digests available supply. The net 30-Day SEC Yield was 2.46% at the end of January, down from 2.59% ending December due to the decline in market yields.

The Florida Trust Short-Term Bond Fund holds a diversified mix of sectors for income generation. We maintain a bias towards shorter average maturities for non-Treasury sectors to reduce overall price volatility while maintaining an income advantage. During 2018, defensive interest rate positioning of the Short-Term Bond Fund has been a key factor in its outperformance compared to the benchmark index. As the Fed gets close to the end of its hiking cycle, we look to gradually extend duration closer to neutral (i.e., in line with the benchmark). The floating-rate coupon bonds (15% of the portfolio), though additive to performance, will be used as a source of funds to extend duration. We expect to remain active buyers of high quality asset-backed securities and corporate credit.

The Fund posted one minimal withdrawal in January. The fund is assigned Fitch rating agency’s highest Fund Credit Quality Rating and Fund Market Risk Sensitivity Rating of AA+/S1.
