Economic and Market Commentary April 2019

In the month of April two-year U.S. Treasury yield rose one basis point to 2.27% and 10-year Treasury yields rose nine basis points to 2.50%, compared to levels at the end of March.

The Fed has been the most important driver of global financial markets in 2019. Global stocks, bonds, oil, and gold, among a host of other assets, have reacted to the U.S. central bank's extended "pause" on interest rate hikes. Due to muted inflation readings (the Fed's preferred inflation gauge fell to 1.6% year-over-year in March), the Fed can afford to maintain easy monetary policy for now. However, we expect inflation readings to edge back toward the central bank's 2% target in the latter half of the year. Further, with U.S. gross domestic product (GDP) growth running above trend and signs of "green shoots" in the Chinese and euro area economies, fears of a global economic downturn should recede as the year progresses. If we're right, the Fed will come back into play later in the year, meaning that the next move in the federal funds rate is still probably another hike, not a cut. In the meantime, easy financial conditions and a rebound in global economic growth should continue to fuel the rally in "risk" assets.

The unemployment rate was 3.8% in March and firms added 196,000 net, new jobs to nonfarm payrolls over the month. U.S. GDP grew at a rate of 3.2% for the first quarter, driven by higher exports and inventory investment that helped offset an underlying moderation in consumer and business demand. The consumer price index registered at 1.9% year-over-year in March. Core CPI, which excludes volatile food and energy prices, printed at 2.0% compared to 12 months ago.

In the month of April, in a report titled, "Growth Slowdown, Precarious Recovery," the International Monetary Fund slashed its global GDP growth forecast to 3.3% year-over-year from 3.5%, which would mark the slowest pace of global growth since 2009. A media frenzy followed. However, such forecast downgrades are neither new nor novel. In the last ten months, the IMF has moved down its forecast for 2019 from 3.9% to 3.3%. In the United States, the S&P 500 hit a new record high as risk appetite continued to course through financial markets. In Europe, the purchasing managers' index for the service sector moved up to 53.3 (a reading above 50 indicates expansion), its highest reading since November 2018. Elsewhere, the Chinese economy grew 6.4% in Q1 2019 compared to the same quarter a year ago, according to official estimates. Don't trust the official numbers? We also see signs of a recovery across Chinese data. Specifically, the Purchasing Managers' Index for the manufacturing sector returned to a level above 50 in March, indicating expansion.

FL. Trust Short Term Bond Fund

The Florida Trust Short Term Bond Fund posted a total return of +0.25% in April, compared to the benchmark ICE BofAML 1-3 Year Treasury Index return of +0.20%. Short credit spreads were very modestly tighter over the month, and spread sectors produced positive excess returns over similar maturity Treasuries. The net 30-Day SEC Yield for the Short Term Bond Fund was 2.29% at the end of April, down from 2.39% ending March.

The Florida Trust Short Term Bond Fund holds a diversified mix of sectors for income generation. We maintain a bias towards shorter average maturities for non-Treasury sectors to reduce overall price volatility while maintaining an income advantage. As the Fed gets close to the end of its hiking cycle, we look to gradually extend duration closer to neutral (i.e., in line with the benchmark) by extending Treasury positions where appropriate. As well, we look for opportunities to rotate exposure from floating-rate coupon bonds (11% of the portfolio) to fixed-rate coupons where appropriate, which will also extend duration. We expect to remain active buyers of high-quality asset-backed securities in consumer sectors and corporate credit. Reducing the portfolio sensitivity to changes in credit spreads will be a benefit of this strategy.

The fund is assigned Fitch rating agency's highest Fund Credit Quality Rating and Fund Market Risk Sensitivity Rating of AAAf/S1.
