Economic and Market Commentary October 2021

The yield on the 2-year US Treasury note rose 22 basis points to 0.50% over the month. The yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury rose six basis points to 1.55%.

Growth for the third quarter came in lower than expected at 2.0% annualized largely due to the Delta-driven surge in Covid-19 cases and worsening issues with the global supply chain. Personal Consumption Expenditures (PCE) inflation readings continue to decline on a month-over-month basis, although year-over-year trimmed mean and median measures have picked up recently. Only 194,000 jobs were added in September, but unemployment fell 0.4 percentage points to 4.8% as the labor force participation rate remained below pre-Covid levels.

Despite the disappointing September jobs report, most market participants expect the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) to announce the decision to start tapering their monthly asset purchases at the November 3rd meeting. We are not expecting any rate hikes in 2022 because the labor market is still a long way from maximum employment and the price pressures we have seen this year are largely the result of supply chain bottlenecks, not easy monetary policy. We also believe the Committee will want to wait to see the impact of tapering before they hike rates. As such, we will be looking closely at the timeline for reducing purchases to see if the FOMC intends to speed up the process to conclude tapering before the end date of mid-2022 that Chair Powell suggested at the September meeting.

FL. Trust Short Term Bond Fund

The Florida Trust Short-Term Bond Fund posted a gross total return of -0.29% in October, compared to ICE BofA 1-3 Year Treasury Index return of -0.30%. The net 30-Day SEC Yield for the Short-Term Bond Fund was 0.30% at the end of October, down five basis points from September month end.

Interest rates moved higher and the yield curve steepened in the wake of the September FOMC meeting, where participants signaled a more aggressive path of rate hikes. The negative performance was the result of higher Treasury yields on the month and modestly wider credit spreads. The one-year Treasury bill was up five basis points to 0.12%, and the two-year note jumped 22 basis points from 0.28% to 0.50%, and the three-year note rose 25 basis points to 0.76%. Interest rates rose as investors anticipated a forthcoming tapering announcement by the Federal Reserve of their asset purchase program and the potential for rate rises in 2022 tied to elevated inflation readings. Interest rate markets have been volatile leading up to the November 2-3 Fed meeting, leading to rises in interest rates across the Treasury curve over the month.

In addition, short corporate and asset-backed securities experienced modest spread widening over the month, resulting in negative excess returns versus Treasuries for October. Spread sectors comprise nearly 70% of portfolio holdings. Low yield levels mean even modest rises in rates erode positive return on a short-term basis. Over longer time periods, the combination of both income and active total return management should result in outperforming the yield of the portfolio, currently 0.30% (30-day net-yield). With higher yields, income earned in the portfolio gets reinvested at more favorable rates. A steeper curve is also positive for forward-looking total return potential.

The Florida Trust Short-Term Bond Fund continues to hold a diversified mix of sectors for income generation. We identify the most efficient sources of income for the portfolio, with a focus on high-quality liquidity. We continue to emphasize a balance between credit diversification and quality using corporates, asset-backed securities (ABS) and mortgage-backed securities (MBS), to maintain diversified sources of high-quality income. We utilize corporate issuance to optimize positioning and exposure to floating rate securities to generate portfolio income without extending duration. The portfolio's short duration positioning versus the benchmark helps mitigate the impact of rising rates. A steep front-end yield curve provides attractive future total return potential. While all-in yields are low, incremental yield from spreads remain attractive and demand for short-dated credit remains robust.

The fund is assigned Fitch rating agency's highest Fund Credit Quality Rating and Fund Market Risk Sensitivity Rating of AAAf/S1. The liquidity of the fund is very strong, with 42% of funds invested in Treasuries, Agencies, and government related securities. The fund had no deposits or redemptions during the month.
