Economic and Market Commentary June 2023

In June, two key issues drove financial markets: resilient U.S. economic data and persistent inflationary pressures. Data released in June showed that the U.S. economy grew at a 2.0% annual rate in Q1, revised up from 1.1% initially reported. In addition, job growth accelerated in the second quarter, with monthly average nonfarm payroll gains of 317,000 in Q2, up from 312,000 in Q1. Meanwhile, though, inflation remains a sticky problem. The Federal Reserve's preferred gauge of underlying inflation, the core personal consumption expenditures (PCE) price index, rose 4.6% versus a year ago—marking 20 consecutive months with year-over-year readings in the 4%+ range. All told, stocks continue to respond favorably to resilient economic data. At the same time, the bond market wrestles with the idea that the Fed will need to take the federal funds rate further above 5% and keep it there for a while to extinguish inflation.

The 2-year US Treasury note rose 50 basis points to 4.90%. The yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury rose to 3.84%, up from 3.64% at the end of May. The yield on the 30-year Treasury remained at 3.86%. After 500 basis points of hiking, the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) "paused" at the June policy meeting, keeping the federal funds rate range at 5.00-5.25%. In Chair Powell's framing of the situation, there are three phases to the tightening cycle. First, the rapid fed funds rate increases when rates are near zero, and inflation is well above the central bank's target. Second, a slower pace of increases as the Fed neared restrictive territory (above the elusive neutral rate). And third, an extended period of restrictive policy to bring down inflation and ensure it stays low. Until recently, many, if not most, investors expected the Fed had done nearly enough and that the next move was likely a cut (earlier this spring, there were four to five 25 basis point cuts implied by the bond market by early 2024!). A macro-outlook predicated upon decelerating inflation and/or slumping growth drove the interest rate view. The problem: neither happened. Instead, a resilient U.S. economy (no recession in 2023) and a sticky inflation problem (core inflation remains in the 4-5% year-over-year range) will probably keep the Fed slowly hiking rates (every other meeting) through year-end.

Florida Trust Short Term Bond Fund

The STBF had a -0.14% total return for June compared to the benchmark ICE BofA 1-3 Year US Treasury index of -0.49%. Fiscal year 2023 is off to a strong start despite short yields persistently climbing. The fiscal year-to-date total return for the STBF was +2.43% compared to +1.71% for the benchmark. The net 30-Day SEC Yield for the Short-Term Bond Fund was 4.50% on 6/30, up from 3.93% as of the 2022-year end.

Over longer time periods, the combination of income earned, and active total return management should result in returns outperforming the yield of the portfolio. With the higher yields currently available to investors, income earned in the portfolio gets reinvested at more favorable rates and the carry, or income earned, of the portfolio provides a larger buffer against any further increase in interest rates. Corporate securities purchased for portfolio in June such as John Deere, Credit Agricole, and Australia & New Zealand Bank had yields at purchase ranging from 4.8% - 5.6%.

The STBF remains conservative with ample liquidity and an up-in-quality diversified mix of credit sectors for income generation. We continue to favor a healthy allocation to liquidity and a defensive positioning in corporates, and floating rate securities where available. The fund remains in a modestly defensive duration position - the duration of the fund is 1.5 years, versus the index of 1.8. While we look to extend duration, it is more challenging with an inverted yield curve: the fund would give up some yield to extend duration (e.g., by purchasing 2- or 3-year Treasuries versus a 3- or 6-month Treasury). Over the next few months, we believe we should be able to move closer to neutral. Given the recent volatility, we are keeping a focus on liquidity. In our view, the Fed Funds rate is closer to the terminal rate (ending level for this cycle) and will remain near current levels for longer than current market expectations. In addition, the Fed has signaled their appetite for higher policy rates as inflation remains stubborn and the labor market hot. This backdrop is likely to result in continued market volatility as the investors continue to parse the impact of tighter financial conditions, growth pressures, and continued restrictive monetary policy.

The STBF is assigned Fitch rating agency's highest Fund Credit Quality Rating and Fund Market Risk Sensitivity Rating of AAAf/S1. The liquidity of the fund is very strong, with 35% of funds invested in Treasuries and government related securities. There were no deposits or withdrawals in June.
